The Hare and the Tortoise

Once upon a time, in a peaceful forest, a proud hare loved to boast about how fast he could run. “No one can beat me!” he would brag to the other animals. Tired of his arrogance, the quiet and slow-moving tortoise finally spoke up. “Maybe you are fast, Hare,” said the Tortoise calmly, “but I believe I can beat you in a race.”

The hare burst out laughing. “You? Beat me? That’s the funniest thing I’ve ever heard!” But the forest animals were excited and agreed to organize the race.

On the day of the race, all the animals gathered to watch. The race began, and the hare took off like the wind, speeding far ahead. The tortoise, on the other hand, moved slowly but steadily, step by step.

Halfway through the race, the hare looked back and saw the tortoise far behind. Confident he had plenty of time, he decided to take a nap under a shady tree. “I’ll still win,” he thought.

While the hare slept, the tortoise kept moving slowly, never stopping. Eventually, he passed the sleeping hare and headed toward the finish line.

When the hare finally woke up, he was shocked to see the tortoise almost at the end. He ran as fast as he could, but it was too late. The tortoise crossed the finish line just before him.

All the animals cheered. The hare hung his head in shame, and the tortoise smiled gently. “Slow and steady wins the race,” he said.
