Once upon a time in a small village located in a thick forest, there lived a young girl named Aloyo. She loved exploring the woods, learning about various plants and animals that called it home. As she grew older Aloyo noticed that the forest was changing. Trees were being cut down, rivers were becoming polluted and animals were disappearing.

Determined to make a difference, Aloyo started a small campaign to cause awareness about conservation. She organized the clean-up initiatives, planted trees and spoke to her community about the importance of conservation.

One day, a severe storm hit the village causing devevastating floods and landslides. The villagers realized that environmental damage had made their homes vulnerable to natural disasters. They came together inspired by Aloyo's dedication and formed a collective effort to restore and protect their environment.

Years passed and the village transformed into a thriving wildlife eco-friendly community.

EXAMINATIONS

What matters is not my size,
Neither is it my colour nor age,
To be promoted to the next level,
Examination is the only yard stick,
To judge my ability to retain facts,
Failure is the bad side of examination,
I hate this side for it doesn't promote me.

What matters is not my tribe,
Neither is it the day I was born,
To be considered for a nice job,
"How did you perform?" they ask me,
For the only yard stick known is examination.
Failures take no jobs today.
Because failure is the bad side of examination.

What matters is not my diet,
Neither is it my company nor origin,
To be considered for an office,
Only examination results stand for me,
They look East, West or North,
For one favoured by the examination.
To take up the opportunity.

Magola
