SECTION B: 50 MARKS

51. Read the passage below and then answer, in full sentences, the questions that follow.

One afternoon at Lima Primary School, the only government school in Ludara Sub-county, pupils gathered under a large mango tree for a debate lesson. Their teacher, Mr. Alindu Joseph, welcomed them and introduced the motion of the day. "Today," he said, "we are going to debate the motion. 'This House Believes That Educating a Girl Child Is a Wastage of Resources'". He then explained the rules of debating and encouraged pupils to express their views clearly and respectfully. The pupils listened attentively as the teacher spoke.

Some looked surprised by the motion, while others appeared eager to respond. A boy raised his hand and said politely, "Sir, I would like to contribute." The teacher nodded and replied, "You will be given a chance. Make sure you support your points."

Soon, the chairperson called the house to order and invited speakers to present their ideas. The class was divided into proposers and opposers. The boy who had raised his hand stood up and said, "I believe education is important for every child." He spoke with confidence as the rest of the pupils listened quietly. Meanwhile, Mr. Alindu Joseph stood at the back, observing the proceedings.

When it was her turn, Anzoo Trace, the leader of the opposers, stood up calmly. "Educating a girl child is not a wastage of resources," she said firmly. "Instead, it benefits families and the whole community." She supported her arguments with clear examples and spoke with confidence, making many pupils nod in agreement.

After all the speakers had presented their views, the secretary stood up and read out the main points from both sides. The pupils listened silently as the summary was given. In the end, the secretary announced that the opposers had won the debate because they had presented stronger and more convincing arguments.

The opposers celebrated happily, clapping and smiling. Many pupils admired Anzoa Trace for her confidence and ability to express her ideas clearly. Mr. Alindu Joseph praised her and encouraged others to learn from her example. By the end of the lesson, pupils had understood the importance of active participation and respect for different opinions.

54. Read the poem below and then answer, in full sentences, the questions that follow.

In the past, people walked on foot
Along dusty paths and rough routes
Journeys were long and full of strain
Through very hot sun and falling rain.

Today, road transport leads the way
Buses and taxis move all day
Boda bodas move quickly and smoothly
Carrying passengers far and widely.

Like a good friend, it serves us well
With many stories it can tell
Farmers and workers ride with pride
Reaching their places on time.

Yet dangers hide upon the road
Accidents, strike and troubles unfold
Let us keep rules wherever we go
So safe journeys may always flow.

Kabwai Akello
