Principles and Practical Steps in Good Summary Writing

All the principles and practical steps earlier discussed for comprehension exercises are relevant to summary writing. A very important addition, which is the most distinguishing factor between comprehension exercises on one hand and summary on the other, is the brevity or conciseness – austere economy of words. To achieve this all-important objective, consider taking the following steps:

Do a first reading slowly for a general idea about the passage's content.

Do a second reading slowly to have a greater depth of content knowledge. Read the given questions on the passage.

Do a third reading to mark off the sentences containing the answers.

Keys to Success in Summary Writing

What is a summary? Write down what you know about them.

By definition, a summary is SHORTER than what it summarizes.

What goes in a summary? Write down your thoughts here.

- Above all, a summary must maintain and communicate the meaning of the original.
- It must include the author's name and title of the article and his/her thesis.
- It must contain the main points of the original—the most important points.
- You'll want to paraphrase rather than use direct quotes.

- You'll also want to show the connection between ideas. (This can be done by repeating “the author states, explains, argues, mentions, says, claims, proposes, points out, maintains, believes, etc.” with each of the main points.)

What does NOT go into a summary? Write down your thoughts here.

- It must NOT contain your views or opinions of the original.
- Usually it will not contain the supporting points, unless one or more of them is of unusual importance.
- It will NOT include details, examples or other minor information.

Why do we need to be able to create summaries?

You will need to do these formally—to turn in for classes—or informally—to help you get the main ideas of all the reading you will do. These skills can help you talk about main events or movies too!

SUMMARY WRITING GUIDELINES

Preparing to Write: To write a good summary it is important to thoroughly understand the material you are working with. Here are some preliminary steps in writing a summary.

1. Skim the text, noting in your mind the subheadings. If there are no subheadings, try to divide the text into sections. Consider why you have been assigned the text. Try to determine what type of text you are dealing with. This can help you identify important information.
2. Read the text, highlighting important information and taking notes.
3. In your own words, write down the main points of each section.
4. Write down the key support points for the main topic, but do not include minor detail.
5. Go through the process again, making changes as appropriate.

1. Complete

A summary should include all the ideas that are essential to the author's thesis.

2. Concise

A summary should be considerably shorter than the passage. Do not include unessential information (length depends upon the purpose and your use of the summary. It could be one-half, one-third or one-eighth the length of the original.)

3. Accurate

A summary should represent the author's ideas. Do not distort the author's views.

4. Objective

A summary should recapitulate the author's points. Do not include your objections or criticisms in the summary.

5. Coherent

A summary should make sense to someone who has not read the original. It should not sound like a list of loosely-related sentences that have been strung together in paragraph format.

6. Independent

A summary should be written in your own words. Do not take strings of words from the source; do not *paraphrase.

Difference between paraphrase and summary

*Paraphrase: contains all the information in the source. No part of the original is left out. Writer rephrases original in his words.

Summary: contains only the most important information of the original. It does not have to follow the organization or order of the original. You do not change the meaning of the original, and you must give clear references as to the origin of the ideas.

Summary Writing Guidelines

For some of your Fast-Write homework assignments you'll be asked to summarize an article. Guidelines below will help guide your reading and writing:

1. Complete

A summary should include all the ideas that are essential to the author's thesis.

2. Concise

A summary should be considerably shorter than the passage. Do not include unessential information (length depends upon the purpose and your use of the summary. It could be one-half, one-third or one-eighth the length of the original.)

3. Accurate

STEPS FOR WRITING A SUMMARY:

Reminder: When we summarize, we are trying to condense material without leaving out any of the important parts.

1) Look at the title and ask yourself what the subject of the piece is; take notes on this. The titles can tell us a lot.

2) Pre-read. This means reading the introductory paragraph, the first sentence of each body paragraph, and the conclusion. When finished, write down what you remember.

3) Read the whole piece. When you're finished, write down what you think are the main points of the piece--in your own words (paraphrase.)

4) Read the piece again writing down in your own words, as you go, the things from each paragraph that you think are so important that you should not leave them out of your summary. Underlining the important points and annotating your texts is helpful. Each paragraph may NOT have a main point; a writer may take several paragraphs to do this especially if there are examples and other support.

5) Write the beginning of your summary. It should state the main claim or author's thesis of the piece, the author and the title.

6) Put the points you wrote down in step #4 in the order you think will work the best and write the rest of your summary. Proofread! Remember: summaries are succinct not lengthy.

Now, you can try creating a summary by following the steps. (There may be some words or phrases you don't know, so you can look these up before or after you write your summary.)

After extracting the topic sentence, the next step is to trim down the sentence and adapt it to the form required by the question. In trimming down the sentence, a. Do away with examples and illustrations. For example, suppose the topic sentence that contains an answer to a question is "He did not like fraudulent people who lie against fellow human beings, steal other people's properties, and betray their countries of origin". You are required to simply write, "He disliked dubious/fraudulent people".

b. Remove any word that can be deleted without destroying the important meaning of the sentence. The inclusion of a single extraneous word in a correct answer would cost a candidate half of the mark allotted the question. So, if a correct answer attracts six marks originally, the candidate loses three marks gallantly. In some extreme cases, the inclusion of such an unwanted word can make the candidate lose all of the marks.

c. You are advised not to use a preamble except you are confident that such preamble flows grammatically into the items that follow. Consider the following example and identify why it is wrong:

EBIGOBERERWA MU KUFUNZA EKIWANDIIKO

1. Sooka osome kiki ekikulagiddwa okukola okugeza funza mu bigambo nga kikumi oba funza emigaso gy'okusoma
