- * This paper consists of three sections: A, B and C.
- * Answer FOUR items in all.
- * Answer ANY TWO items from Section A.
- * Section B is compulsory.
- * Answer ANY ONE item from Section C.
- * All responses should integrate knowledge, skills, values and attitudes.
- * Credit will be awarded for logical analysis, application of entrepreneurial concepts and relevant illustrations.

SECTION A

(Answer Any Two Items)

ITEM 1

Ms. Amina Nakato grew up in Kiryandongo District where many farmers sold fresh fruits at low prices because of inadequate processing facilities. After completing Advanced Level education, she failed to obtain formal employment. Instead, she carried out market research and discovered growing demand for natural fruit juice in nearby towns.

Using savings obtained from poultry farming and support from family members, she established Fresh Harvest Juices. She purchased fruits from local farmers, processed them into juice and packaged them in labelled recyclable bottles. To expand the market, she used social media marketing, customer feedback systems and product demonstrations.

Within four years, the enterprise expanded significantly, creating employment opportunities, increasing demand for agricultural produce and improving household incomes in surrounding communities. The enterprise later obtained UNBS certification and began exporting products to neighbouring countries.

Task

Prepare a presentation in which you:

- (a) Explain six entrepreneurial competencies demonstrated by Amina.
- (b) Assess the contribution of Fresh Harvest Juices to economic and social development.
- (c) Identify the category of entrepreneur represented by Amina and justify your answer.
- (d) Recommend government programmes and support agencies that can assist the enterprise to achieve further growth.

ITEM 2

After completing Senior Six, Robert Mugisha returned to his home area in Wakiso District and observed several unmet needs within the community. Restaurants lacked reliable supplies of fresh mushrooms, households demanded affordable organic vegetables and schools required safe packaged drinking water.

Robert conducted market surveys, interviewed potential customers, analysed competitors and evaluated available resources before establishing Green Valley Enterprises.

The enterprise combined mushroom production, vegetable growing and water purification services. Through training programmes and youth enterprise support initiatives, Robert expanded his customer base and established supply contracts with schools and restaurants.

Task

Prepare a presentation in which you:

- (a) Explain the process Robert followed in identifying and evaluating business opportunities.
- (b) Analyse the environmental factors that support entrepreneurial success.
- (c) Examine the challenges likely to affect the enterprise and suggest practical solutions.
- (d) Evaluate the suitability of sole proprietorship for the enterprise.
- (e) Explain the entrepreneurial functions performed by Robert.

ITEM 3

The Youth Enterprise Development Centre (YEDC) was established by entrepreneurship graduates to address youth unemployment in Eastern Uganda. The centre provides entrepreneurship training, business incubation services, mentorship programmes, financial literacy education and market linkage support.

The centre charges development agencies and corporate organisations for consultancy and training services while offering free support to vulnerable youth. Over the years, hundreds of young people have established businesses and secured employment opportunities through the centre.

However, development partners have announced gradual withdrawal of financial support, forcing the centre to seek sustainable sources of revenue while maintaining its social mission.

Task

Prepare a presentation in which you:

- (a) Explain the meaning of social entrepreneurship.
- (b) Describe the characteristics that qualify YEDC as a social enterprise.
- (c) Assess the economic and social contributions of YEDC.
- (d) Recommend strategies for achieving financial sustainability while maintaining social objectives.
- (e) Advise the founders on the most suitable legal structure for the enterprise.

SECTION B

(Compulsory)

ITEM 4

Fresh Harvest Agro Processors is a school-based enterprise that purchases pineapples, mangoes and passion fruits from local farmers and produces packaged natural fruit juice.

Although customer demand has increased, the enterprise faces challenges related to inconsistent product quality, poor packaging, delayed deliveries, low employee commitment, labour turnover and increasing competition from similar products.

Management intends to acquire a semi-automatic juice processing machine and expand production. Before approving the proposal, stakeholders require evidence that the enterprise has effective systems for production management, marketing, human resource management and business planning.

Task

Prepare a report in which you:

- (a) Explain the quality control and quality assurance measures necessary for maintaining product standards.
- (b) Assess the factors that influence production decisions in the enterprise.
- (c) Recommend marketing strategies that can increase market share and customer loyalty.
- (d) Propose human resource management strategies that can improve employee motivation, productivity and retention.
- (e) Explain how acquisition of the machine will affect the operational, marketing, financial and human resource sections of the business plan.
- (f) Evaluate strategies the enterprise can adopt to remain competitive in the market.

SECTION C

(Answer Any One Item)

ITEM 5

Bukedea Agribusiness Cooperative Society was established by farmers engaged in sunflower, maize and soybean production. Members contributed share capital and secured a commercial bank loan to establish an agro-processing facility.

The cooperative purchased insurance cover for machinery, stock and buildings. Following a destructive storm, insurance compensation enabled the business to resume operations. The cooperative has also invested in shares listed on the Uganda Securities Exchange and is considering investing in treasury bonds.

Task

Prepare a report in which you:

- (a) Explain the importance of insurance to the cooperative.
- (b) Explain the principles of insurance relevant to the enterprise.
- (c) Distinguish between the primary and secondary markets.
- (d) Assess the benefits and risks of investing in treasury bonds and ordinary shares.

(e) Advise the cooperative on suitable capital market investment opportunities for future growth.

ITEM 6

Ssemanda Building Materials Limited is a rapidly growing enterprise dealing in construction materials. The business is registered for tax purposes and employs several workers.

During a tax education seminar organised by URA, the proprietor learned about VAT, PAYE, Withholding Tax and Corporate Income Tax. The enterprise also intends to improve its financial management systems by preparing financial statements, maintaining proper records and complying with tax regulations.

Task

Prepare a report in which you:

- (a) Distinguish between direct and indirect taxation.
- (b) Explain the importance of taxation to economic development.
- (c) Explain the challenges faced by businesses in complying with tax regulations and suggest solutions.
- (d) Explain the importance of financial statements in business decision-making.
- (e) Assess the contribution of proper financial management and tax compliance to business sustainability and growth.
