SECTION A

Answer all items

ITEM 1

In 2025, leaders from various African countries met during a Pan-African Economic Forum in Addis Ababa to discuss strategies for promoting regional integration, economic development and social transformation. During the discussions, several historians emphasized the importance of understanding Africa's pre-colonial socio-economic systems.

They argued that long before colonial rule, African societies had established extensive trade networks, effective systems of governance, centres of learning and strong cultural institutions that contributed to social stability and economic growth. Particular attention was given to the role of Islam in promoting trade, education and cultural exchange across North Africa.

Task

Assess the factors that led to the spread of Islam in North Africa and examine its contribution to the socio-economic development of the region.

ITEM 2

A conference on African political development was organized at Makerere University in 2025. During the discussions, scholars observed that many contemporary conflicts between governments and citizens arise when leaders fail to respect people's rights, traditions and aspirations.

Several speakers compared these challenges to the experiences of Africans during the colonial period when foreign powers imposed political control over African societies. They noted that Africans responded in different ways depending on local circumstances.

Task

Using specific examples from different parts of Africa, examine the reasons why Africans resisted colonial rule during the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries.

ITEM 3

In preparation for a leadership and governance symposium, students of history studied major revolutions that transformed societies and political systems. One case that attracted significant attention was the French Revolution of 1789.

The students observed that many modern societies continue to experience tensions arising from social inequality, exclusion from decision-making and economic hardship.

Task

Assess the causes, major events and consequences of the French Revolution of 1789 and show the lessons modern societies can learn from it.

SECTION B

PART I

Answer one item

ITEM 4

In 2024, African historians gathered in Khartoum to commemorate important resistance movements that shaped African history. During the discussions, participants highlighted the Mahdist Revolt as one of the most influential religious and political movements in nineteenth-century Africa.

They noted that the movement emerged in response to widespread dissatisfaction with foreign domination, economic hardships and religious concerns.

Task

Examine the causes of the Mahdist Revolt in Sudan between 1881 and 1898 and assess its significance in African history.

OR

ITEM 5

At a regional development conference, economic historians examined how African societies adapted following the decline of the trans-Atlantic slave trade. Particular attention was given to the strategies adopted by African states to transform their economies and promote legitimate commerce.

The Kingdom of Asante was cited as an example of a state that had to adjust to changing international economic conditions.

Task

Assess the measures that African states could adopt to strengthen and transform their economies following the abolition of the trans-Atlantic slave trade.

PART II

ANSWER ONE ITEM

ITEM 6

In August 2024, diplomats, military officers and scholars met in Nairobi to discuss international peace and security. During the conference, participants reflected on the causes and consequences of global conflicts and emphasized the need to learn from past experiences.

Particular attention was given to the First World War and its impact on international relations.

Task

Discuss the causes, major events and consequences of the First World War of 1914–1918 and assess the lessons that modern nations can learn from it.

OR

ITEM 7

At an international conference on governance and development, participants examined the long-term effects of European expansion on different regions of the world.

While some scholars argued that colonization promoted administrative development and infrastructure growth, others emphasized its negative political, social and economic consequences.

Task

Compare the impact of European colonization on the United States of America and Canada with its impact on Africa.
